

PWNA’s American Indian Education Fund (AIEF) program offers scholarships for dedicated students who are working to build better futures for themselves and their tribes. Navajo Native and Arizona State University senior Callie was able to fund her academic journey and ease the digital divide with support from AIEF’s scholarship service and their collaboration with the Grow With Google (GWG) Indigenous Career Readiness Program.

Graduating with her bachelor’s in environmental engineering, Callie plans to work in engineering design back home. Grateful for AIEF and GWG, she says, “This is the only scholarship to offer digital training and check up on me. You’re making a big impact on Native students, so thank you for all you do and thank you to the entire organization.”

At age 90, Newton has experienced tremendous loss. A member of the Crow Tribe, he served in the Korean War, became a widower in 2017 and lost 19 friends and family members to COVID-19. Newton is fully vaccinated, but he suffers from medical issues and must watch his diet.

Recently, he and other Elders of Crow Agency received a summer emergency box with nonperishable food, water, and hygiene items through our Sioux Nation Relief Fund program.

NOTE FROM PWNA PRESIDENT & CEO, JOSHUA ARCE

The Haaland v. Brackeen decision from the Supreme Court is a resounding affirmation that Native people are seen as politically distinct, sovereign nations, and inextricably linked to the core of the American judicial system.

Having worked in the tribal foster care system, the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) has been the gold standard, when properly exercised, for all foster care systems because of its common sense approach to the 'best interest of the child' philosophy. Our children are seen, our people are heard, and our communities are recognized by an unmistakable margin with a 7-2 vote.

Let's work together and amplify Native issues, Native causes, and continue to ensure that more people are Native Aware.®
